OK, who celebrates fifth?

Bank of America does.

For the fifth year in a row, Bank of America has shared the success of our company with our employees with a valuable Sharing Success compensation award.

To recognize the team's hard work, this award is over and above regular compensation. And this year, we're proud to commemorate a first — nearly all these awards are in Bank of America stock.

That means 97% of our employees shared $1 billion worth of Bank of America stock this year, above regular compensation.

"I want to thank my teammates here on Long Island for their continued hard work and dedication."

While other banks might make awards like ours every once in a while, I'm proud to work for an organization that has rewarded our employees for five years in a row. Because success is better when it's shared."

Signs of mice at home? Time to hire the real pros.

It's winter, when mice look for warmth indoors. Like your house. They then urinate and defecate all over "their" nest. It's messy and nasty. Not to mention the diseases such as Salmonella and Hantavirus (which has killed a number of Eastern LIers) they can carry. If you've seen or heard signs of mice, call us now. Don't play cat and mouse with these dangerous rodents. Skip the copy-cat companies and call Twin Forks Pest Control, the thorough, thoroughly local professionals.

Leslie Granger, Bideawee CEO

OFF THE LEASH

with LESLIE

Un-fur-gettable anecdotes, adventures, and a-ha moments from a pet rescue pro!

Introducing yourself can be challenging.

How do you summarize everything important about yourself, without seeming like you've got an ego the size of Jupiter? Like anything, they say proficiency comes with practice and knowing your audience. You might take a different approach meeting the Queen of England than introducing yourself to a roving gang of bikers (or, in my experience a barking gang of Rovers).

Say, for example, you're the box of kittens someone dropped on my doorstep last winter – upon meeting you, I might dispel with the usual "Hi, I'm Leslie Granger, President and CEO of Bideawee – come to me with your animal adoption needs" and instead go with the more conversational: "Oh my God! Phil, come quick – somebody left a bunch of kittens on our front porch!"

While I'd love to say that situations like these are rare, when people learn you work in animal welfare, they tend to treat you like their personal pet consultant. From inquiring about regulations regarding transporting a beloved dog's remains across state lines, to finding a new home for the cat who brought an end to the family's prize-winning Goldfish – I believe the legal term is "Piscicide" – experiences like this help engender new respect for the patience of that doctor you once met at a party, where all you could think to ask was if they had any advice for that stubborn rash on your shoulder.

Picture this: Katy Perry – international pop icon. A few years ago, she decided to address that pet-sized void in her life and was searching for the Golden Doodle of her dreams! And she needs it "like, today." Watch as I work my butt off to try to make that adoption happen, even if the only result is a lovely voicemail I get to show off to my sons. (Who admitted I was cool for the entire hour, so this job isn't exactly without its perks.) I wouldn't say I mind consulting with the occasional celebrity on the ins and outs of animal welfare, but at a certain point, you have to cut out the middleman and address your audience directly. So, what better time for an introduction than the "tail" end of a column?

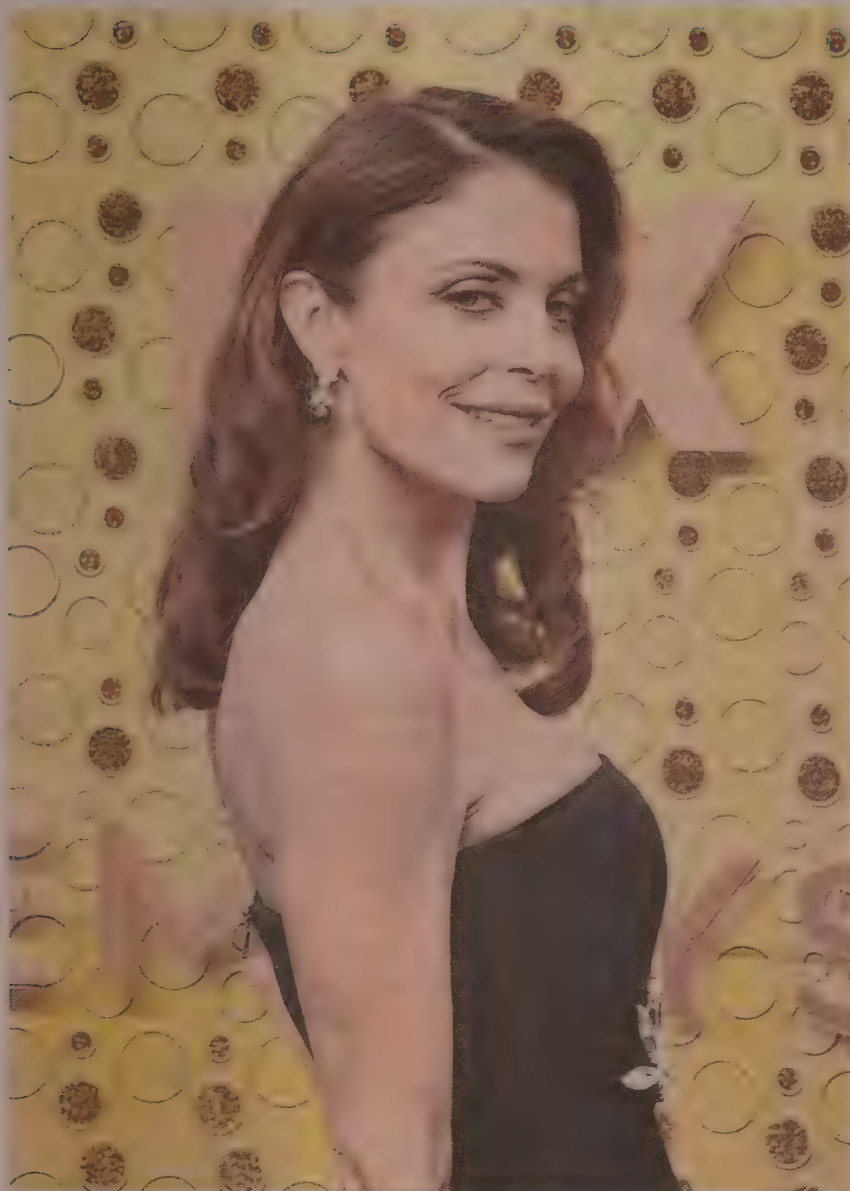

Hello again! I'm Leslie Granger, President and CEO of Bideawee, an animal welfare organization with three locations in Manhattan, Wantagh, and Westhampton. And we're not exactly new in town, with origins dating back to 1903, though I don't think I started until at least 1904... We offer services beyond your standard animal shelter and I look forward to sharing these with you. I'll be writing to you bi-weekly here at Dan's Papers, looking to entertain and educate in a light-hearted series. Here's hoping this column can be a source of insight for you, and a sort of pressure release for me – like talk therapy. And while over the coming months I plan to provide you dear readers with tons of animal facts, interviews, and a peek behind the scenes – there's one piece of information I won't be sharing: My home address. Sorry box of adorable kittens.

Timing: Saving lives for almost a century since 1903

BETHENNY FRANKEL

BY FLO ANTHONY

Bethenny Frankel has reportedly jumped into action to assist Ukrainians fleeing their country during the Russian invasion. On February 24, the day the takeover began, the Bridgehampton resident announced she was preparing to ship supplies to NATO countries bordering Ukraine through her BStrong charity. Frankel's organization originally committed to distributing $10 million worth of aid, however, on February 25, she announced her decision to increase that goal to $20 million. According to the Daily Mail, the former Real Housewives of New York cast member documented the relief efforts on her Instagram account, posting a video of boxes being packed with supplies by members of her BStrong team amid a warehouse filled with boxes.

According to Bennington Banner, Alec Baldwin recently increased his real estate portfolio which includes a house in Amagansett. The controversial actor has reportedly purchased a 50-acre farmhouse property in Arlington, Vermont for $1.75 million. The new property is described as a classic Vermont 18th century farm that features 55 beautiful acres, a 3,600-square-foot main house and a nicely renovated 1,800-square-foot guest cottage with two bathrooms. Real estate broker Faith Rhodes told the publication that the Baldwins are smitten with the Vermont community, adding, "They got to know it and loved it."

On February 24, an appellate court ruled that East Hampton resident Jay-Z is entitled to more than $4.5 million in royalty claims against perfume company Parlux that filed a $68 million lawsuit against the billionaire rap entrepreneur in 2016 accusing him of failing to uphold his end of a 2012 contract to promote his fragrance, Gold Jay Z, reports the New York Post. The Appellate Division, First Department issued a ruling on appeals that had been pending during the trial, finding that Jay-Z and his company "are entitled to summary judgement on their royalties counterclaim." "The record is clear: Parlux sold licensed products after July 31, 2015, but failed to pay royalties on those sales," the judge wrote in the unanimous decision.

Ina Garten's new show Be My Guest features the Barefoot Contessa opening up her East Hampton home to a slew of celebrity guests. However,

Today co-hosts Hoda Kotb and Jenna Bush Hager seem to be disappointed their names weren't on the invitation list. People reports that on the February 22 episode of Today with Hoda & Jenna, the duo revealed their frustrations with Garten after learning that their colleague, Willie Geist, was invited to appear on Be My Guest before them. "Willie Geist got invited before we did," Bush Hager, said. "I'm going to have to talk with Willie about this." Kotb chimed in, "We've been calmly waiting. We heard about the show and were like, 'No one from the Today show will be invited. Not yet. First they have all the big stars, and then they go down the line.' But sweet Willie?" The ladies went on to say Geist may have "snagged that invite because he featured Garten on his show, Sunday Today with Willie Geist. However, she was also on their Summer House's Andrea Denver confirmed Winter House is coming back — but he's not returning. On February 24, Denver told Morgan's Pop Talks, a podcast on The Dipp subscription website, "Starting tomorrow, I am going to go to Hawaii to relax for a few days, and I am not going to Vermont. I started dating recently and she is a very important person to me." Denver recently told Page Six, "I can't spoil too much, but I'm dating someone, and I'm really happy. And it's kind of related to my last summer. I can't really say much. But yeah, I'm happy — I've got to say that," seemingly referring to his time on Summer House.

Amagansett homeowner Sir Paul McCartney and his wife, Nancy Shevell, recently sold their penthouse co-op on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan for $8.5 million, The Wall Street Journal reported. The sale price is barely half of the $15.5 million the couple bought it for in 2015. The apartment went through several price cuts before being sold to a mystery buyer. The unit was listed for $12 million in June before being reduced to $10.5 million, which was the asking price under which it went into contract the last time.

South Fork Wind Groundbreaking Ceremony in Wainscott

New York Governor Kathy Hochul joined officials for a groundbreaking ceremony on February 11 in Wainscott at LTV Media Center to mark construction starting on the South Fork Wind farm, the first offshore wind project in New York State. South Fork Wind is one of six offshore wind farms in the works in the Empire State with the goal of renewable energy. It involves building 12 turbines about 30 miles off Montauk's coast. A small group gathered to protest the plan.

'Cars into Coats': Long Island Car Dealers Raise 85K for Children in Need

Representatives from Long Island charities received thousands of warm winter coats at North Bay Cadillac in Great Neck as part of the Greater New York Automobile Dealers Association's annual coat drive. Dealers across Long Island raised more than $85,000 for brand-new coats to give to local area children. The event was held in conjunction with Operation Warm, a national nonprofit that manufactures brand-new, high-quality coats and shoes for children in need. Charities who received coats included the Mildred W. Fairclough Foundation, Blessings Plan, New Horizon Counseling Center, Progressive Holiness Church and Holiday's Promise.

GOP Taps LaLota for Zeldin's Seat

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

Republicans have nominated Nicholas LaLota, a Suffolk County political operative from Amityville, as the party's candidate to replace outgoing U.S. Rep. Lee Zeldin (R-Shirley), who represents the East End in Congress.

The Suffolk County Republican Committee tapped LaLota a week before the New York State Republican Party nominated Zeldin as its gubernatorial candidate — the congressman is forgoing re-election to seek higher office — and months after multiple Democratic contenders threw their hats in the ring.

"I accepted the nomination and pledge to do my part to put the House's gavel back in the right hands," tweeted LaLota, alluding to the GOP's bid to flip the U.S. House of Representatives from its current Democratic majority under House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) in November's mid-term elections.

Party faithful are betting on a repeat of last year's red wave — the increased GOP voter turnout in response to Democratic President Joe Biden unseating former Republican President Donald Trump — on Election Day. The race will be the first since New York State lawmakers recently redrew the congressional maps under the decennial redistricting process that GOP advocates filed a lawsuit to block, alleging Democrats tilted the odds in their favor. New York's First Congressional District, which previously covered the five East End towns and eastern Brookhaven, now includes less of Brookhaven and runs through central Suffolk to eastern Nassau County.

LaLota, a married father of three, is a U.S. Navy veteran, former commissioner of the Suffolk board of elections, an ex-Village of Amityville trustee, and currently serves as chief of staff to Suffolk Legislator Kevin McCaffrey (R-Lindenhurst), the newly minted presiding officer of the county legislature.

He faces a potential Republican primary on June 28 from three candidates: U.S. military veteran Robert Cornicelli of Saint James, former Brookhaven Town deputy supervisor Anthony Figliola of East Setauket and Edward Moore Jr., an entrepreneur from Smithtown.

Democrats who previously announced plans to run in the Democratic primary preceding the race for Zeldin's open seat are Suffolk Legislator Kara Hahn (D-East Setauket), Suffolk Legislator Bridget Fleming (D-Noyac) and former Babylon Town Councilwoman Jacki Gordon.

Riverhead Transit-Oriented Housing Project Advances

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

The Town of Riverhead has named Uniondale-based RXR and Jericho-based Georgica Green Ventures to be master developers of a transit-oriented housing development project planned near the Riverhead Long Island Rail Road station.

The town board selected the two firms during its February 15 board meeting after a yearlong search in which a half dozen developers submitted proposals for what's known as the Railroad Street Transportation Oriented Development, a designated New York State Urban Renewal Area.

"The creation of a transportation oriented development at the Riverhead railroad station will vastly increase public transportation options to live, work and play in downtown Riverhead and beyond," Riverhead Town Supervisor Yvette Aguiar said.

Riverhead was awarded state grant funding several years ago to create the plan, adopt new zoning and issue a request for qualifications for the project. The plan includes partly turning the train station parking lot into a new mixed-use development in a long-blighted area.

The winning proposal calls for 243 apartment units, 2,340 square feet of retail space, 12,800 square feet of commercial space and a four- to five-story parking garage with 420 to 520 spaces.

Construction is expected to take about three years.

Man Admits Threatening Sag Harbor LGBTQ+ Advocates

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

A Bayport man has admitted to sending death threats to LGBTQ+ affiliated individuals, organizations and businesses, including the Sag Harbor office of the Long Island LGBT Network, for nearly a decade.

Robert Fehring pleaded guilty February 23 in Central Islip federal court to mailing more than 20 letters threatening to assault, shoot and bomb advocates and members of the LGBTQ+ community.

"We will not tolerate hateful threats intended to invoke fear and division, and we will hold accountable those who make or act on such threats," said Breon Peace, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of New York.

In addition to the Sag Harbor advocates, Fehring also sent graphically detailed threats to the New York City Pride March, a barber-shop in Brooklyn and elected officials, prosecutors said.

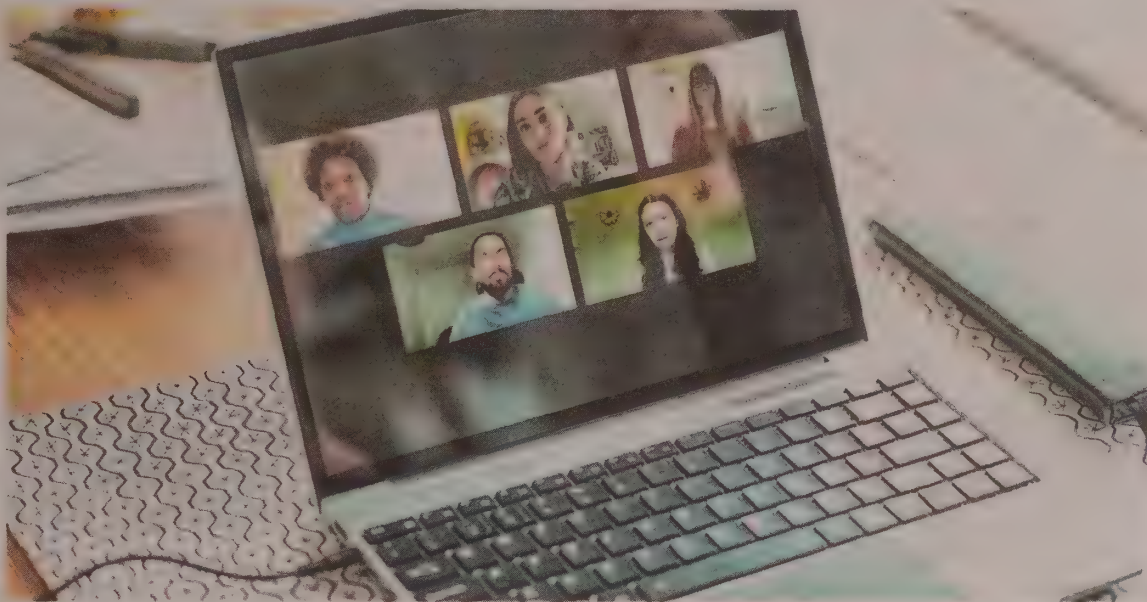

When investigators executed a search warrant at his home they found copies of the threatening letters, 20 gay pride flags stolen from Sayville, and reconnaissance-style photographs from a June 2021 Pride event in East Meadow, authorities said. Also seized were two loaded shotguns, hundreds of rounds of ammunition, two stun guns, and a stamped envelope addressed to an LGBTQ+ affiliated attorney containing the remains of a dead bird, authorities said.

Fehring, 74, faces up to five years when he is sentenced by U.S. District Judge Joanna Seybert.

Shelter Island 'Zoom Bombing' Probed

GETTY IMAGES

ZOOM HAS BECOME A TARGET OF PEOPLE LOOKING TO DISRUPT LOCAL GOVERNMENT MEETINGS.

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

Shelter Island Town Police are investigating a Zoom bombing — participants sharing offensive images or comments during virtual meetings held online — in the town's latest Water Advisory Committee meeting held on February 28.

During the committee's meeting — the agenda for which included status reports on water levels, water districts and Fresh Pond, among other issues — an unidentified participant screenshared two images and a video that were deemed offensive.

"The contents of the video and images were disturbing and potentially illegal," police said in a statement.

The incident comes after Southold Town Police recently investigated a pair of racist Zoom bombings during Southold Town Board Zoom meetings.

The issue is not unique to the East End, as many local government meetings have experienced similar attacks over the past two years, since meetings were largely held online due to the coronavirus pandemic.

"I will not comment on the nature of imagery and associated verbal harassment other than to say that it was highly offensive, pornographic and scatological, and clearly intended to shock," said Peter Grand, the committee's chairman. "The attacker obviously did not self-identify, but the offense was recorded. We quickly shifted our open meeting to email invitation only, bringing together all of our community members to continue work on important water-supply issues, with only a few minutes of disruption."

The Shelter Island investigation is continuing. Committee members did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Man Charged With Giving Riverhead Teen Pot Candy

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

A 20-year-old Riverhead man was arrested for allegedly giving last month a 14-year-old Riverhead Middle School student candy that was infused with Tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), the psychoactive ingredient in marijuana, Riverhead Town Police said.

Marvin A. Dominguez Torres was charged with endangering the welfare of a child, released on a desk appearance ticket, and will face his initial court appearance at a later date, police said. The student shared the candy — dubbed "Medical Nerds," a play on the neon-colored, pebble-shaped mini-candies created by the Willy Wonka Candy Company — with two other students on February 16 before it was destroyed.

"Commercially made THC candy is sometimes packaged similar to conventional candy products," police said in a statement. "This is just another example on how important it is to keep prescription drugs, alcohol, nicotine and marijuana away from anyone under the age of 21."

The children did not require medical attention. Investigators said that the incident was not connected to recent suspected overdoses at Riverhead High School, one of which was reported to involve a THC-laced chocolate bar. Police also urged adults who may have recently legalized recreational marijuana edibles in their home to keep them locked up away from minors.

Police asked that anyone with information on the case to call them at 631-727-4500 ext.312 or the Riverhead Police Department Crime Hotline at 631-727-3333. All calls will be kept confidential.

DAN'S COLUMN

When Winter Was Winter

BY DAN RATTINER

Back in the last half of the 20th century, the Hamptons was not a world occupied by the rich and famous. It was a world of local people — local people who hoped that a lot of tourists would come out in the summer season to put money in their pockets. Sometimes the summer was good. Sometimes not.

I founded Dan's Papers in that era as a free summer newspaper. In the winter, I would go somewhere warm. But when my kids got old enough to have to go to school, I couldn't do that anymore. Because of that, I became a full-time local person, and had to struggle through the cold, hard winter, like everybody else.

After a few years, having begun to publish once a month in the wintertime, I decided the newspaper should have a little fun. Beginning in January, I began publicizing a big event we would hold in March. I called it the "I Survived the Winter Party." It would be for the locals. And we'd do things that the summer people imagined we would do if we locals had a big end-of-winter party. A beard-growing competition. A chili-baking competition. A talent show for tap dancers, banjo players and singers. A bouncy castle. A beauty contest. A clam chowder competition. A jump rope exhibition and a hot tub.

That year, we held the first such event in what is now Bay Street Theater, but was then a disco closed for the season that reopened for us that one night. Besides all the aforementioned, we had boxing gloves and fat sumo wrestler strap-on padding that could be Velcroed onto willing grammar school children offered up by their parents. These children would smack at each other aimlessly on a gym mat until one or another would fall down. We also sold "I Survived the Winter" T-shirts.

The party got underway around 6 p.m. It was over by 9 p.m. And everybody had a great time.

This column is not about that first party, however. Nor is it about the second or third.

I wish to describe my own personal experience for the fourth, which because I had run the first three parties at various other venues, and because I was the boss, I told Joel, our office manager, that it was now his turn to put the party together. He accepted the challenge and said he'd make it a bit more upscale, if that was all right with me.

"Your job will be just to show up," he said.

I basked in the glow of not having to do much on March 19, 1983, the day of the party. A big snowstorm had arrived in the morning. Would we cancel? Not my problem. I did make a phone call around noon (this was before cell-phones) and learned it was still being held, so as night fell, I walked out into the blizzard, got in my car, and in the dark slowly drove over toward Sag Harbor through the unplowed roads to where the party would be.

But where exactly was it? I was pretty sure it was at the Harbor View up by Long Beach, though it might be at the Harborside, which was a mile away in downtown. I'd go to Harbor View. And if the joint wasn't jumping, it would be at the other, just 10 minutes away.

Well, 30 or 40 cars were parked in and around Harbor View and music was blaring from a band inside. So this indeed was the place.

Checking my heavy coat in a cloakroom by the entrance, I strode quickly into the main ballroom where all the action was taking place. The crowd was bigger than the Survival parties we'd held in the past. I was very pleased. Some people I knew waved me over to their table and I waved back and went over and sat. There was an emcee and a rock-and-roll singer with a five-piece band thumping out something by the Rolling Stones while people wheeled around the dance floor. I got introduced to some of the other people at the table. All knew about the paper, but didn't know me. They were glad to meet me. One asked me, "How are you related?" and I shrugged, not knowing what they meant.

Oddly, I hadn't seen anybody from the paper at the event yet. Probably, I thought, they were in the back with the caterer. They'd come around.

Thirty minutes later, with two rum and Cokes in me — good to warm up a cold night in a storm — the music stopped, there was a drum roll, and the emcee spoke into the microphone.

"Will Jill and John please come up to the front and cut the cake?" he said.

Yup. Wrong party.

I got up from the table, panic-stricken. "Where you going, Dan?" somebody said. "I'll be back," I said, which, of course, was a lie.

My destination was the cloakroom attendant. No sense making a big deal out of this.

"Do you have a pay phone?" I asked.

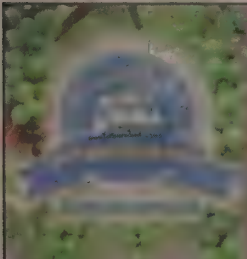

"Yes, we do," she said, motioning over at all the heavy coats jammed into a small closet. I looked puzzled.

"It's in the back of the closet," she said.

My final memory of this event is this: I am sitting on the floor in the cloakroom closet. I've managed to part the coats enough to put a quarter in the pay phone slot and call Harbor View. But there's not enough space amidst the coats to actually speak to anybody unless I slide down to the floor — remember this was before cellphones. So there I am, with snow and ice dripping on my head from the fur coats of those who had come late to the party, and I am waiting as somebody is fetching Joel to get him over to the pay phone at the Harborside to tell him I'm on my way.

I get him.

"Where are you?" Joel asked anxiously. "Everybody's waiting for you. And what's all that noise?"

Unity with Ukraine: East End Ukrainian Community Rallies Against Russian Invasion

PROTESTERS OF ALL AGES JOINED THE RIVERHEAD RALLY.

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

From sleepless nights worrying about loved ones caught in the crossfire to gratitude for the outpouring of support from neighbors, the East End's Ukrainian community has been on an emotional roller coaster since Russian troops invaded their homeland on February 24.

The emotions boiled over as more than 150 protesters rallied on East Main Street in Riverhead four days after the invasion, calling for peace and condemning Russia's onslaught that claimed hundreds of lives in less than a week. Protesters sang the Ukrainian national anthem — "Glory and Freedom of Ukraine has not yet Perished" — waved the blue and yellow flag of Ukraine, and held signs calling for an end to the conflict as passing cars honked in support.

"We wish that more people would understand that the war is not just happening on Ukrainian soil," said Oleg Pozdniakov, 37, a small business owner who emigrated from Ukraine in 1998 and now calls Hampton Bays home. "It affects the whole world, starting with the European Union, with all the prices going up ... now that he's threatening with a nuclear bomb, that's even worse. He's not threatening just Ukraine, he's threatening the whole world."

The rally was among protests that broke out in cities around the world immediately following the biggest attack on a European nation since World War II, when Russian troops entered Ukraine under pretenses widely viewed as dubious — such as Russian President Vladimir Putin claiming the invasion was necessary to oppose the supposed rise of neo-Nazis under Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy, a Jewish descendant of Holocaust survivors. Days after the invasion, Putin put his nuclear forces on alert while world leaders worked to de-escalate the conflict.

In addition to East Enders rallying alongside Ukrainians, support has been pouring in, including on the Twin Forks, where local church leaders report a heartwarming amount of donated supplies such as clothing that will be shipped overseas.

"The response has been overwhelming," said Bohdan Hedz, parish priest of St. John The Baptist Ukrainian Catholic Church, which neighbors Polish Town in Riverhead. More bags of clothing, toiletries and other essentials to be sent to Ukraine piled up on the church steps while Hedz led the rally less than a mile away.

Meanwhile, the United States and other nations imposed sanctions on Russia's central bank and other sources of wealth, dealing a crushing blow to the country's economy and further punishing Moscow. Companies have also increasingly distanced themselves from Russia as a result. And days after U.S. Rep. Lee Zeldin (R-Shirley), who represents the East End, called on President Joe Biden to shutter the Russian-owned Killenworth Estate in Glen Cove that has housed the nation's diplomats for 70 years, the U.S. mission to the United Nations expelled 12 Russian intelligence operatives, citing alleged espionage.

"The United States cannot let Putin's people doing his bidding live in tax-free compounds on Long Island," Zeldin said as hundreds of other protesters rallied outside the estate to call for an end to the war.

"This action has been in development for several months," said U.S. mission spokesperson Olivia Dalton.

Upon issuing the expulsion order, the U.S. mission to the United Nations described the Russian diplomats as "intelligence operatives" who had been "engaging in espionage activities that are adverse to our national security."

Russia's U.N. Ambassador Vassily Nebenzia told reporters the diplomats had been asked to leave by

NEWS & VIEWS

March 7. He said Russia would respond to the move "because it's diplomatic practice."

Nebenzia then raised the issue at the start of a U.N. Security Council meeting on the humanitarian situation in Ukraine, describing the U.S. move as "hostile" and a violation of its commitments as host of the U.N. headquarters in New York.

U.S. Deputy U.N. Ambassador Richard Mills responded: "Those diplomats that have been asked to leave the United States were engaged in activities that were not in accordance with their responsibilities and obligations as diplomats."

It was not the first time such action was taken locally. In 2016, then-President Barack Obama ordered a Russian-owned Brookville mansion described as a "recreational compound" to be closed, resulting in 35 Russian diplomats being expelled, because of Russia's alleged interference in the 2016 U.S. presidential election.

Back at the Riverhead rally — which was attended by local officials such as Suffolk Legislator Bridget Fleming (D-Noyac), Suffolk County Deputy County Executive Jon Kaiman and Riverhead Town Supervisor Yvette Aguiar — Hedz said one of the upshots is that some East End residents got a crash course in Eastern European geography.

"Originally, probably everybody mistook Ukraine and Russia as one country," Hedz said. "I heard that a lot, 'No, you're Russian!' But no, I'm Ukrainian, I'm not Russian. 'But Ukraine was part of Russia.' Yes, it was at one point. 'So you're Russian?' No, I'm Ukrainian. I think by now, everybody knows that Ukraine is a different country."

Not all issues surrounding this conflict are as easy to clarify. The most pressing question on everyone's mind that is impossible to answer remains: How will this crisis end?

"Russians are the only ones who can stop this," Ukrainian immigrant Vitaliy Zyulkovskyy said at the Riverhead rally. "But it's not easy to convince them."

Westhampton's Starr Boggs Sold to Restaurant Group Behind RUMBA, flora

STAR BOGGS IN WESTHAMPTON BEACH

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

The Starr Boggs restaurant, a favorite longtime eatery in Westhampton Beach, officially sold on Friday after many months of speculation about a sale.

The new owners, David and Rachel Hersh of the Rooted Hospitality Group, have a proven track record for successful East End restaurants. The award-winning Center Moriches-based restaurant group is behind Cowfish and RUMBA, both waterfront restaurants in Hampton Bays, as well as flora in Westhampton Beach — and there are plans to open a restaurant at the former Starr Boggs spot under a different name by summer.

"We are very excited to take over the existing Starr Boggs location," David Hersh told Behind The Hedges. "It was an iconic restaurant with an iconic chef. We plan to take that foundation and build upon it to create one of the best restaurants on Long Island, named Fauna, that will serve flavorful local fresh seafood dishes, prime steaks with a large wine list. This location will be the 'brother' restaurant of our other Westhampton Beach restaurant, flora, which we opened August 2020 and has already become a local favorite."

Starr Boggs, the owner-chef, has been in business for 40 years and has been looking to sell for some time. The building at 6 Parlato Drive, behind the village's newly revamped Main Street, was listed for $3.75 million in 2020. He declined to disclose the terms of the deal and the real estate deed transfers are not yet available. Mike Carroll of Marketplace Realty brokered both sides of the sale.

The deal took longer than expected to come to a close, Boggs said. "We shook hands in June and he kept telling me he was going to do it, and I believed him — he's a man of his word."

Hersh declined to comment on the transaction, but said, "Starr is an amazing man, chef and leader, and we are honored to follow in his footsteps."

While Boggs admitted he's a bit melancholy now that the closing took place, "I'm happy that the restaurant is sold," he said. He offered his thanks to "all my loyal customers and all the great staff I've had over the years. Certainly I'm going to miss that. I'm going to miss working here on Long Island and with the beautiful food that we have," he said, but, "I'm celebrating the fact that I've had a great run."

Boggs, who turned 70 this year, has been making masterful meals in Westhampton kitchens since 1981, combining American, Italian and Mediterranean influences. When he came to Westhampton by way of Nantucket in 1981, Susan McAllister, who he worked for at The Inn at Quogue, got him a piece of the Patio after just one season. It was his "stepping stone," he remembered.

In 1985, they sold both restaurants and he used the proceeds as start-up money for the first Starr Boggs, which he opened on Sunset Avenue, where Tony's Asian Fusion is now located. The 40-seat restaurant "was considered a Manhattan restaurant. There was a waiting list for months there," Boggs recalled.

The restaurant was known for local fish specialties, dry-aged prime beef and an extensive wine list, and had a presence across four different locations every summer since 1985 — with one exception in 2003 — and it may be best known for its Monday night lobster bake, a Westhampton tradition that drew crowds of around 200 for the outdoor meal.

After several moves around the village, Boggs bought the building at 6 Parlato Drive, located on a 0.36-acre property, with the help of a real estate partner, Leonard Riggio, the founder of Barnes & Noble who has a home in Bridgehampton. Riggio and Boggs have been friends for more than 30 years, from when they both lived in Quogue, Boggs said. "Lenny was very generous with helping me out," he said.

Looking back on his time in business, he said it was all because he was lucky to have good friends, good staff and good customers.

The partners had the building renovated. The former Parlato family home has housed several restaurants over the years, from Red Fox to Westhampton Grill and two or three others, Boggs said. The village gave him a permit to double the size of the kitchen, and the restaurant is about 2,700 square feet, with space to seat 150.

The building has a lot of charm, including a New England-style porch that has a blue ceiling. In addition to the main dining room, there are two bars, one being outside, a private area that he calls the club room, and garden seating.

Boggs put the restaurant up for sale in 2018 for $4 million, and, though there was interest, it didn't sell. After "the most trying summer" during the COVID-19 pandemic, Boggs was ready to hang up his chef's hat and apron for good, he told Behind The Hedges in December of 2020.

What's to come at Fauna, the former Starr Boggs restaurant?

The Hershes founded Rooted in 2009, opening RUMBA on Canoe Place Road in Hampton Bays one year later. Cowfish Restaurant followed in 2012. RHUM, a sister restaurant to RUMBA, opened on Patchogue's revitalized Main Street in 2016. Flora, located on Westhampton's Main Street, is their most recent endeavor and serves New American cuisine. All of the restaurants are open year-round.

Rooted also owns Avo Taco in New Hyde Park, New Orleans and, soon, Bayside, Queens.

"I think the new owner is going to reap the big benefit of Westhampton Beach's progression," Boggs said. "The new leadership has done remarkable things."

When Boggs first came to Westhampton Beach, it was "the party town," he said. As the clubs closed down, the area "became a little depressed for a little while." With improvements to infrastructure, such as the sewage treatment connectivity and a redesign of parking on Main Street, the past few years have seen the village going through an upswing.

While the restaurant will no longer be called Starr Boggs, the plan is to keep it an upscale establishment, according to Boggs. "I really wish the new owner David all the best. He's a hardworking guy. I think he has a good plan."

Fauna will have a steakhouse feel, Hersh said. It will "not only serve prime steaks like 10-ounce filets and 14-ounce New York strip steaks, but will also have large steaks for two to four people to share, like the 48-ounce prime porterhouse and the king of steaks, the 36-ounce tomahawk ribeye," Hersh explained.

"We will feature five to six local seafood entrees that will dance around on your tastebuds. We'll have a variety of sides, desserts and appetizers that will be great to share at one of our two

Rooted also plans to showcase local artists in the decor at Fauna and plans to feature live jazz. "Brunch will be served on the weekends featuring Rooted Hospitality Group's signature Bloody Mary, made with house-made seven-day marinated vodka. Our wine program will excite both new and old-world wine lovers," Hersh said. "We don't mark our wine up with the typical restaurant margins. We'd rather charge a great price because we want to see an amazing bottle of wine on everyone's table. Just like with every other Rooted property, it's about the overall experience of our guests."

Fauna will be open seven days a week for lunch and dinner year-round. Catering, both onsite and offsite, will be available.

Rooted Hospitality Group will be looking to hire staff to join the team at Fauna. "We are blessed to have some of the best restaurant operators in all of New York working with us and we couldn't be more proud of our teams. We believe that taking care of the guests begins with taking care of our people and we strive to have a great work culture where our people can shine. We are delighted to offer an incredible benefits package for our team members," Hersh said, adding that they offer "a great health, dental, vision plan for all employees, as well as a matching 401k program and two-weeks paid vacation to all full-time hourly employees."

"We encourage all happy people who love serving others to please apply at rootedhg.com to be part of this exciting restaurant."

INSURANCE ADVISER

KEVIN LANG

What is Excess Uninsured Motorist Insurance Coverage?

Umbrella insurance policies are affordable coverage and the better insurance companies offer excess under/uninsured motorist insurance coverage on the umbrella.

Why is this important? Under/uninsured motorists are those drivers on the roadways that do not have any liability insurance at all on their vehicle or have minimum or to little coverage.

Let's say you are hit by a motorist that is carrying $25,000 per person, $50,000 per accident and $10,000 property damage. This person has the minimum liability insurance allowed by NYS law. What if the other driver caused you serious injuries, loss of wages and pain and suffering that exceed the $25,000 under their policy, You very well might be able to collect under your auto insurance and Umbrella policies under/uninsured motorist coverage.

The bodily injury portion of your umbrella policy only covers the other party(s) if the accident is deemed to be your fault. It would not pay anything to you since you cannot be liable to yourself. If the damages to you or others in your vehicle exceed their coverages then the under/uninsured motorist coverage on your auto policy covers you. The under/uninsured motorist coverage on your umbrella would kick in after the coverage on your auto policy is exhausted.

In addition to this column's insurance tip of the week, I want readers to know they can call me for advice, questions or any coverage concerns at any time at 1-866-964-4434.

Dan's Cover Artist Joe Fig Resurrects Pollock in Miniature Form

BY OLIVER PETERSON

This week's cover art, "Namuth's Pollock #10" by artist Joe Fig is somewhat unique in the history of Dan's Papers covers, presenting a photograph of a miniature sculpture of a painter making a painting (try saying that 10 times fast). The sculpture, which is now on view at the Parrish Art Museum's XS exhibition of small works (through April 3), depicts East End legend Jackson Pollock working at his Springs studio, as filmed by East Hampton art photographer Hans Namuth who took hundreds of pictures of the iconic painter during the fall of 1950. It's one of many in Fig's series of miniature artist studios, both historical and contemporary, recreated in painstaking detail. Other East End subjects in the series include Willem de Kooning, April Gornik and Eric Fischl (also on view at the Parrish), Chuck Close, Ross Bleckner and Andy Warhol, to name a few.

While not the most detailed or expansive of his miniature artists and studios, "Namuth's Pollock #10" stands out for its Russian doll quality, as described above. It showed the Abstract Expressionist from the perspective of Namuth who chronicled his efforts and, for the image in question, asked Pollock to paint on glass so he could film his process from beneath it. The resulting footage revealed a view looking up from what would have otherwise been a canvas laid flat on the studio floor.

Here, Fig talks about this sculpture and the works that have earned him worldwide acclaim.

What inspired this week's cover art?

With the Pollock piece, I'd previously made a miniature sculpture of his entire studio, and then I was fascinated with making a smaller, independent piece based on the Hans Namuth photographs, and especially that film. ... Just after that, Pollock stopped working and then went off and started drinking again, and had major problems.

Have you been to the Pollock-Krasner House in person?

Yeah. In fact, that was a really pivotal moment in the way I worked. When I started making miniature sculptures, I started off with historical artists in their studios and the references I had, or was working from, were only found in books. So I made a few of Barnett Newman, Clyfford Still, even de Kooning I made before that, and at that time I'd gone out to the Pollock House on a beautiful, late-October day with my wife. ... Knowing the historic photographs is one thing, but to actually be there physically is a completely different experience. And to walk around in the studio, I was really surprised how much smaller it was than it appears in the films and photographic stills.

Even though Pollock was no longer around, to be in the studio really had an impact on me, and so after I made that Pollock sculpture — which I recreated from the Namuth photographs and then from physically being there — all the work after that was focused on contemporary artists and actually going to their studios and having that personal interaction, because I felt I was missing that.

How was it created?

The challenge for me is always replicating in miniature the texture, the scale, the mark making and all that stuff, that it's authentic. So for the Pollock piece, it was a little challenging because I tried different techniques ... sometimes paint drips on the floor — you can't just drop water or paint on it because it's too big, the scale isn't quite right.

With the Pollock piece, I was trying a few different techniques of trying to splatter it with a toothbrush and all this other stuff. I ended up doing his process, just on a smaller scale, using enamel paint and, instead of a big stick, a tooth pick, and basically working like he does, drawing with it over the plexi. ... (The figures) are made of polymer clay, Sculpey, and then the skin tones are hand painted in oil paint.

JOE FIG'S MINIATURE RECREATION OF WILLEM DE KOONING IN HIS STUDIO

"POLLOCK 1950 # 1," (2002) BY JOE FIG

What is it particularly about Pollock that turns you on?

I would throw de Kooning in there, as well, especially as another artist out on the East End. ... I see the two of them as kind of a yin-yang. Pollock is just such an iconic figure in the art world and the history of art ... everyone does a Pollock painting at one point. ... He's probably the most famous American painter. Everyone knows who Pollock is. And his work is amazing. Stand in front of one of those paintings and you just get lost. He completely revolutionized the contemporary art world at the time.

How detailed are you going with the construction of these studios?

I would pretty much build them like a house, especially the Pollock one because all the beams on the inside were exposed. For that, it was literally like framing out a house. ... It's very much like building. Especially the April Gornik and Eric Fischl — that was the biggest one, that took me probably seven or eight months to complete. ... I adored the two of them. They've been very generous and very supportive of me, and Eric had the blueprints right there, so he gave me the blueprints to work from, which was really helpful.

Do you have any closing thoughts?

In 2007 or so I had my first show at the Parrish in Southampton. I love that museum. And then when they moved to Water Mill, to have my work, especially the pieces they have, the Pollock piece (and the Gornik/Fischl studio), in their collection, it's a real honor to have that. It's a really, really great museum.

The Grift: Bay Street Teaches Art of the Con on Sag Harbor Streets

BY DAVID TAYLOR

This past year, Bay Street Theater has been pushing the boundaries of the experiences it can offer audiences — from an outdoor staged concert of Camelot in Bridgehampton to a production of Macbeth, rehearsed and recorded for on-demand viewing in under a week. The next experience, a village-wide immersive theater piece known as The Grift, looks to be the most engaging yet.

Written and directed by Tom Salamon for its San Diego debut in 2015, The Grift is a hit immersive, site-specific experience that gives participants the chance to train in the art of deception, meeting shady characters throughout various locations and solving clues that will hopefully lead to the take-down of a criminal mastermind. An immersive theater aficionado for over a decade, Salamon has created experiences for Walt Disney Imagineering, Amazon Studios, Netflix, Nike, Google and the like, while also writing and directing unique productions such as The Wizards of Oakwood Drive, Accomplice and Goosebumps Alive.

Part theater, part game, the latest rendition of The Grift takes place throughout Sag Harbor Village, beginning and ending at Bay Street. An audience of 50 per show, split into groups of 10, will be thrust into an adventure that will test their intelligence and problem-solving skills as they're trained in scams like The Pig in the Poke, The Round-the-Corner and The Money Swap. Players will quickly become master grifters in order to pull off one final con in Sag Harbor.

Salamon describes The Grift to be like “stepping inside Ocean's Eleven or The Sting, or any of those other conman movies,” an idea that came to him several years ago and instantly seemed like a concept worth developing as an immersive theater experience.

“That nugget feels like a really good idea — and, of course, there's a long way to go before you solve all the problems with how you do that — but when you come up with something that's going to be really fun to engage in, I love that initial nugget of a gem of an idea,” he says. “My stuff is really active, so I want the audience to feel like they're really a part of it. There's immersive stuff there that gives you agency to walk around and look at different things.”

The Grift found acclaim in San Diego, and later London in 2018, by acting as a work of historical fiction — shaping its narrative to fit seamlessly and organically in the context of its location, thus creating two distinct productions. Now coming to Sag Harbor, the show will include “some inventive history of Sag Harbor and some actual history” as it takes groups to meet characters at a local bar, art gallery, garden, townhouse and other stops along its winding adventure. The scene inside the townhouse, in particular, “will knock your socks off,”

“THE GRIFT” COMES TO BAY STREET THEATER ON MARCH 17

Salamon says.

With an audience of 50 split into five groups of 10 to be sent on their puzzle-solving adventures in Sag Harbor, the question of structure arises. As numerous groups embark on their journeys around the same time, their own way and at their own pace, how are they supposed to stay on track and on time in a way that the narrative makes sense?

The answer is a strict timeline (about 90 minutes) and a “little bit of a juggling.”

Unlike some other immersive theater pieces, participants can't visit story points in any order. There is a set order of scenes, each running about 12 minutes, depending on the puzzle-solving speed of the group. The actors and stage managers are also tasked with keeping groups moving along in time with the preceding and following groups.

“It's looser than traditional theater, but it's still within this time window of experiencing a scene,” Salamon says explaining that structure is key to telling a compelling, engaging story. “There are opportunities to play along, participate, engage, figure things out, hold things, learn these cons, unlock locks, solve clues and things like that, but that is all within a structure that is very organized and time-driven.”

Featuring mental and physical puzzles that must be solved within an allotted time, similar to an escape room, The Grift is balanced in favor of its players. Between the 10 members of each group, they should have no issue finding the solutions they seek and advancing to the next plot point in time for the next group.

“This is not meant to be really, really challenging because what happens then is you have winners and losers in those things (escape rooms), and I don't want anybody to feel like a loser,” Salamon explains, adding that, on the other hand, “if it's too simple, it's no fun. It's just finding that balance of what's fun to engage in and figure out, but not so difficult that people walk away feeling like, ‘Oh, I lost.’”

Ultimately, The Grift is intended to be a fun, immersive experience unique to Sag Harbor, the likes of which have been historically exclusive to big cities like NYC, Los Angeles and Chicago. Salamon looks forward to its debut and admits that, as is the case with all his productions, seeing participants enjoy taking part in his carefully crafted story is his favorite part of the process.

“Watching people participate in it and get super involved in it, you can see when people are having a really good time, as opposed to a darkened theater where you can get a tangible sense of what the audience is feeling, but when you're watching people do this thing and they're smiling, laughing and are completely engaged, that part is really fun,” he says.

The Grift runs Thursday, March 17 through Sunday, April 3, with six shows per week. Masks and proof of vaccination are required for entry. Tickets start at $39 and are available through the box office by calling 631-725-9500 and at baystreet.org.

Artists & Writers Game Ushers in a New Era with Art

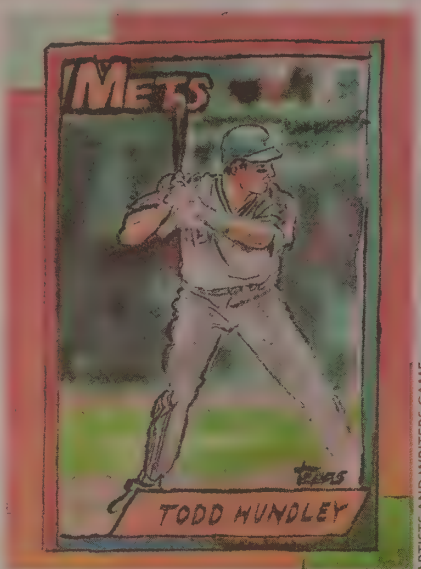

BY OLIVER PETERSON

With a nearly 75-year history, the East Hampton Artists & Writers Charity Softball Game has cemented itself as a celebration of local creatives and a fundraiser for important charities on the South Fork, but the organization behind the event is working to make it something much more than an annual softball game. As part of that growth, the board has organized a special Spring Training 2022 art exhibition to benefit the game's usual charities — covering the circle of life, from early childhood learning to hospice care — and it opens with a reception at Kathryn Markel Gallery in Bridgehampton (2418 Montauk Highway) this Saturday, March 5 from 5–7 p.m. The show will continue on Saturdays and Sundays from 11 a.m.–5 p.m., throughout the month of March.

Artists & Writers board president Ronnette Riley explains that Kathryn Markel donated her gallery space for Spring Training 2022, and the show will be manned by volunteers from the organizations it benefits — including The Eleanor Whitmore Early Childhood Center, Phoenix House Academy, The Retreat and East End Hospice — which will be given 60% of each artwork sold, while participating artists get the other 40%. So far, 30 artists have donated work, and four writers are scheduled to read at the show: Zack O'Malley Greenburg, Paul Winum, Gabrielle Bluestone and David Andelman.

"For artists, we have quite a mix of age ranges. And also artists who are well known, especially in the local area, and other pieces that are more outsider artwork," Riley says, pointing out that some pieces in the show are sports themed, but most artists simply did whatever it is they do best. "You can't tell artists what to paint, so we have a combination of work," she adds, describing a wide array of styles and media, such as painting, photography, sculpture and mixed media pieces, and an equally varied price range.

"In terms of price point, we have things that are $100 and we have things that are several thousand at the show. And the idea that 60% of it will be a tax deduction, a write-off because it's going to the charities, I think is a great idea. Plus, people should have fun art," Riley says naming artists such as Andy Friedman, who painted a series of Topps baseball cards, hyper-realistic wood carver Randall Rosenthal, illustrator Lynn Matsuoka, expressionist painters Stephanie Brody-Lederman and William Quigley, longtime Artists team captain Leif Hope, representational artist RJT Haynes, Cynthia Karalla who creates sculpture based on the Mueller Report, and humorous outsider artist Peter Wood, to name a few.

TODD HUNDLEY TOPPS BASEBALL CARD

With all the big-name players and participants over the years, including Alec Baldwin, Ross Bleckner, Ben Bradlee, Christie Brinkley, Matthew Broderick, Dick Cavett, President Bill Clinton, Taylor Hanson, Dustin Hoffman, Abbie Hoffman, Peter Matthiessen, Jay McInerney, George Plimpton, Lori Singer, Martha Stewart, Tom Wolfe, and so many others, the Artists & Writers Game has long had the clout to become bigger than just a softball game, and Riley hopes to follow that thought toward bringing in more money for charity year-round.

"The thing is that we've had a board for many years, but it's not a membership organization. You don't pay dues. One of our new initiatives, which we're launching in March, as well, is to create a secondary group called Friends of the Artists & Writers," she says. "Because we have a whole bunch of people who do for us various things, but they're not on the board," Riley continues, pointing out that not everyone can play in the game, but they can still champion the cause. "We're hoping that by expanding, the people who have skin in the game, so to speak, who have a role, will help us do other things. So we've floated many ideas."

Another unique aspect of the Artists & Writers Game, and events like the Spring Training 2022 exhibition and art sale, is the participation of volunteers from the charities they support. "Our charities aren't just on the receiving end, and I think that's what makes it special, too," Riley says. "We're a nonprofit organization, but we pass through the money to other nonprofits. And they don't just sit and wait for a check, they actually help us and participate, and are part of the game," she explains. "I don't think people realize that the Phoenix House, those young men come and they set up and then they take down, they clean the field. Hospice manages the game and organizes that level. Everyone has a role. I like the fact that the charities are actually involved in the success of the game. And they will be involved in the success of this art exhibit."

Our magical family trip

Last week, I wrote about friends who have nurtured and become my extended family. This week, I was delighted to host my two daughters and their kids for a week at magical Disney World and Universal Studios.

Lucky for me, the kids had a mid-winter break, giving us a chance to use my timeshare in Orlando. By the way, I don't recommend buying a timeshare, but it does give us an excuse and place to go every February, and boy am I having a ball with them!

Fortunately, the Florida weather held up to its reputation, setting the scene for a picture-perfect getaway. I've been in Florida launching Dan's Papers Palm Beach these past few months and have loved every minute of my time there, but I have missed my kids and grandkids dearly.

It was great to be together again, and we even had an added child! My daughter Elizabeth recently got engaged and we included her beloved Dino's daughter.

Being experienced at traversing the crowded parks, we planned one day at the pools and the other at the enormous parks.

I love Universal Studios' Wizarding World of Harry Potter, but this year it was packed wall to wall with people. I think every square inch of Universal was filled with guests, but I am guessing that at least 90% of them were unmasked! I wore mine indoors while waiting for the rides.

The kids' no. 1 favorite ride in Universal!

Even though we had a "fast pass" that helped the lines move faster, it remained a hike to get on the rides.

The five kids, squealing with joy, voted that their best ride was the roller coaster at Universal that was enormous and sent the kids down steep hills, and even turned them upside down! I watched from the sidelines in horror!

One of my favorite experiences was our voyage in the Animal Kingdom, where we missed my favorite Lion King show, but did get to go on a safari, during which I reminisced sweet memories of my "real," fabulous safari in South Africa.

For now, the kids got joy from what they saw.

They also loved a water ride so much they did it twice, getting soaking wet both times!

With the massive crowds in the park making it difficult to get around, I used a lifesaving scooter that had plenty of room for everyone to put their filled-to-the-brim backpacks. Good thing they had a change of clothes!

Epcot's ball lights up like a rainbow at night!

With the help of a guide we hired for the day, we made our way to the memorable Epcot Center. We decided to pile into our rented SUV for the 15-minute drive to the park. We had paid for parking in the Animal Kingdom lot and it was free in Epcot.

The highlight of that day was a new show and ride based on Avatar. It made me feel like I was flying high over the imaginary world of Pandora, the fictional moon featured in the hit film.

The seat rumbled and twisted, making me feel like I was flying as the brilliant animation made the trip exhilarating, but thankfully kept my stomach where it should be!

Entering Universal hand in hand!

That wasn't the case for a race car ride that I was assured would be "easy" on my guts. We began slowly in the exhibit, sponsored by Chevrolet, but suddenly sped into the open air and I had to scream with all my guts to relieve the stress, feeling like I was going to explode!

I thought to myself, "This is fun?" The kids say it is, but I'm not so sure!

The greatest fun for me was to see the children walking together arm over arm as we headed from ride to ride. It made my heart soar!

Our stay at the Sheraton Vistana Villages offered us great rooms with a kitchen that made having breakfast together easy!

The pool days required me to get up early and reserve eight lounges for our family. There was a sign that said "No reserved lounges," but no one listened and the staff did not enforce the "rule."

Entering the magical "Avatar" show, one of the highlights of our trip!

When the kids left for home before me, I found a quiet, adults-only pool — it was totally calm and quiet! Nevertheless, I miss the kids throwing the football at each other in the pool and squealing as they darted through the sprinklers.

What an extraordinary time we had together! The trip is one for the memory book!

I chose to wear my mask in the large crowds of people.

At the meeting tree in Animal Kingdom.

Addy and Morgan in Harry Potter land!

We started at Animal Kingdom right as the park opened.

Bridgehampton Dining & More

TATE'S KEY LIME COCONUT COOKIES

BY HARRY POWERS

This week, Loaves & Fishes in Bridgehampton dares adventurous foodies to try Licia Kassim Householder and Sybille van Kempen's recipe for tortilla soup, found in The Loaves & Fishes Farm Series Cookbook: Featuring the Food Store. Of course, you could also just stop by the cookshop and buy some — your call. But before you decide, take a look at this week's East End foodie news bites.

Bridgehampton is abundant with small shops, history and your next great meal. If you love Greek cuisine, then you'll love Elaia Estiatorio. It was included among Newsday's prestigious Top 100 Long Island Restaurants in 2021. The all-white interior evokes the colors and charms of Santorini and Mykonos. The beet salad with butter beans and pine nuts resting on honeyed Greek yogurt is majestic, and the leg of lamb is solid as well.

Bobby Van's Steakhouse sports a mahogany bar counter, polished floors, dim lighting and white tablecloths. The two-inch-thick steak is well seared on the outside and has a strong aged beef flavor. Other great cuts include the veal chop loin, filet mignon and porterhouse for two. Fun fact (or rumor): Truman Capote is believed to have finished In Cold Blood in the original Bobby Van's!

Nothing screams summer more than a blue Pierre's wine bottle, with an illustrated sailboat on the label. Weather permitting, sitting outdoors at Pierre's is always a pleasant experience. Great entrees include the French onion soup, bouillabaisse and any of the fresh pastas.

As spring approaches, be sure to dine al fresco at the Bridgehampton Inn & Restaurant's well-appointed patio. The restaurant scores on some creative dishes, such as BBQ pulled pork peach dumplings and tequila lime chicken pasta.

American Pie Pizzeria lives up to its slogan: serious calzones, good pizza. Located in the Bridgehampton Commons, the square grandma pizza hits the spot, as does the eggplant parmigiana and spinach-filled ravioli.

Tate's recently shared that its popular Key Lime Coconut flavor, which originally made its debut as a seasonal offering, will now be a permanent flavor. Tate's Key Lime Coconut Cookies will be sold online at tatesbakeshop.com and on Amazon, and they'll also be available in stores nationwide by mid-March. The new permanent flavor is like spring in a bag of cookies!

There's a new Jamaican restaurant at 617 Montauk Highway in Center Moriches. Good Bickle is the brainchild of siblings Yakeev Chance, Lester Ellis and Yannick Ellis. Look for classic dishes such as jerk chicken, ackee and saltfish. It's a family affair as the recipes were passed down from their mom or grandmother.

East Hampton's Rowdy Hall will offer Irish specials on St. Patrick's Day, March 17 and on Sunday, March 20. The special Irish two-course prix fixe will be available for $35 at dinner. The menu items will also be available during lunch a la carte on both days when Rowdy will be open from noon to 9 p.m. The specials menu includes corned beef and cabbage, or bangers and mash. Erin go bragh!

Did You Know: The folks who operate 668 The Gig Shack in Montauk will be taking over Elbow East in Southold, which overlooks Long Island Sound at Kenny's Beach. Look for a Memorial Day opening.

Bits & Bites: Inlet Seafood in Montauk is now open on weekends for the season.

Recipe: Loaves & Fishes' Tortilla Soup

(Makes about 3 quarts)

Chili Paste Ingredients:

- 2 dried ancho chilies
- 2 dried guajillo chilies
- 2 dried chipotle chilis
- 2 cups chicken stock

Directions: Add dried chilies to a medium bowl. Bring chicken stock to a boil in a small saucepan; pour over chilies. Cover bowl with plastic wrap and let sit for 10–15 minutes, until chilies are soft. Purée mixture in a high-powered blender, and strain. Reserve for soup. Remaining paste can be stored for 1 week in fridge or 1 month in freezer.

Soup Ingredients:

- 1 3 1/2 lb chicken
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1 large white onion, chopped
- 6 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 small jalapeño, seeds and ribs removed, minced
- 2 28 oz cans crushed plum tomatoes
- 10 corn tortillas, cut into 6 wedges each, divided
- 1/4 cup chili paste

- 1/2 cup chopped cilantro, plus some for garnish
- 1/4 cup freshly squeezed lime juice
- 2 cups vegetable or canola oil
- 1/2 cup shredded goat Gouda cheese (optional)
- Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Directions: Place chicken in a large stockpot, and fill with enough cold water to cover. Bring to a boil, reduce to a simmer, and cook for 1 1/2 hours, until chicken is fully cooked and tender. Remove chicken from pot and place onto a tray, reserving the liquid. Cool for about 30 minutes, or until cool enough to handle. Remove the meat and shred with two forks. In a Dutch oven, add olive oil, onions, garlic and jalapeño, and sauté on medium heat until onion is soft and translucent, about 8–10 minutes. Add crushed tomatoes, 2 chopped tortillas, chili paste and 2 cups reserved chicken stock; simmer for 20 minutes. Purée in batches in a high-powered blender until smooth. Add in cilantro, lime juice, salt and pepper, and purée for another 30 seconds. Pour back into the pot, add shredded chicken and stir to combine. Heat a small pot with the oil to

LOAVES & FISHES' TORTILLA SOUP

350°F on a thermometer. Add remaining tortilla wedges and fry until golden brown. Remove onto a paper towel-lined plate and sprinkle with salt. Pour soup into bowls, and stir in tortilla chips and cilantro. Sprinkle with cheese if desired.

Something to Wine About:

Palmer Pinot Blanc

BY LINDA DELMONICO PRUSSEN

Need an easy drinking white wine to have on hand? The Palmer Vineyards' Pinot Blanc 2019 is a perfect wine to keep in stock. Clean and fresh with floral and tropical notes, this is a super pairable wine. Of course, it can be enjoyed with pasta in light sauces, chicken, seafood, salads and quiche, but this lovely wine also pairs well with pizza, burgers and chips. This is a light- to medium-bodied white with a crisp and balanced, but not overly acidic, finish.

Winemaker Kareem Massoud was especially pleased with the weather and its effects on the 2019 pinot blanc crop. He says, "September's gorgeous dry, sunny weather and cool nights made 2019 into a vintage to remember."

This wine was fermented entirely in stainless steel to preserve the varietal character of the fruit and spent three months on its lees before bottling.

Lees are leftover yeast particles in wine. Leaving a wine on its lees gives the wine a weightier feel and a creamier texture. Interesting to note: By law, Champagne must spend 12 months on lees. In the case of Champagne, that time on the lees happens in the bottle, and with longer time on lees, flavors like shortbread and brioche are often imparted into the wine. With shorter times on lees, it's more about adding texture and complexity, and less about imparting flavors.

The added texture and body are what make this very quaffable wine so amenable to combinations of foods outside the realm of expected white wine pairings. Palmer Pinot Blanc 2019 retails for just $27.

Serving the Hamptons:

The Culmination of a Dream for 75 Main's Zach Erdem

BY OLIVER PETERSON

Selling the Hamptons will have to move over when Discovery+ premieres Serving the Hamptons, a delicious, new 75 Main-set restaurant reality series, on April 7.

According to the announcement in Variety, the docuseries follows the “young, sexy restaurant staff” at Southampton’s 75 Main and catches “all of the drama they dish up on and off the clock.” Spread across five hour-long episodes, the show is filmed at Zach Erdem’s restaurant and at a “gorgeous beach house” Erdem rents for the staff to live, “provided they follow his rules and take care of his customers.”

Erdem, who’s no stranger to the camera and who has welcomed media attention throughout his time at the helm of 75 Main, is cast as the taskmaster struggling to keep his employees in line and to make sure his celebrity clients get top-tier treatment. As Variety explains, “That’s easier said than done when your staff plays even harder than they work to take full advantage of all a summer in the Hamptons has to offer.”

“It’s not just life at 75 Main. It’s about the Hamptons, it’s about the restaurant, it’s about the life,” Erdem tells Dan’s Papers. “The front of the house, back of the house, and what these people do.”

On the management side of things, Erdem is joined by Victoria Hilton, who helps the team get to work on time, and keeps them from drinking on the job or fraternizing with other members of staff. And it will come as no surprise that “rules will be broken, personalities will clash, secrets will be revealed, a shocking love triangle will unfold and true romance may just get in the way.”

A number of celebs visited the restaurant while the show filmed between July 15 and August 20, 2021, including Kendall Jenner, Ivana Trump, Paris Hilton, Brooke Shields, rapper 6ix9ine, financier Anthony Scaramucci, billionaire John Catsimatidis and Patriots owner Robert Kraft.

“Some people, of course, they did not want to be on camera,” Erdem says of his regular patrons and some of 75 Main’s most famous visitors. “The big names who said they didn’t want to be on TV, they were respectful, very nice. We’d seat them somewhere where there are no cameras ... the back patio at 75 Main, the garden,” he continues, adding, “We didn’t lose any customers. No one got disrupted or anything, and everyone was really excited and very happy that the Hamptons was getting its own show at a known restaurant.”

The fact that Erdem continues to consider customer retention and his diners’ comfort, even in the midst of his big moment to shine, speaks to how this Turkish immigrant from an almost archaic village found such massive success in an incredibly challenging industry, located in one of the most exclusive towns in the world. One might argue that his humble beginnings are a big part of why he’s persevered, and why the restaurateur is about to enter a whole new level of fame and recognition.

As Erdem tells it, he grew up poor, farming with his family in the mountains of Turkey, working 12-hour days in the summers before winter came, burying everything in snow. “It was in the mountains and the little village had no road, no TVs, no electricity, so basically cave life,” he says. “I had been a shepherd in the mountains with the animals all day long, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.”

One day, Erdem says he found a newspaper by the railroad that showed pictures of New York City, so he kept it, and his dream began to form. “I didn’t even know what New York City was back then. I was like, it’s really cool, and I kept that picture. ... I had it for years ... I hid it from everyone,” Erdem says, admitting that he knew nothing of the Big Apple beyond the newsprint images he cherished. But against all odds, he made it to the real New York City in 2002. “I’m like, OK, now you want it, now you’re here. The rest is history.”

A bit of luck led Erdem, who was homeless and nearly penniless in NYC, to Southampton and a dishwashing job at then-restaurant 75 Main Street. Some lucky breaks and no shortage of effort and persistence in the local restaurant scene eventually landed him ownership of 75 Main in 2010. Needless to say, watching Serving the Hamptons take shape has been like a dream for Erdem, even after 12 years as owner of 75 Main and attracting so many famous customers and friends.

ZACH ERDEM AT 75 MAIN

All of the Kardashians have spent time at the restaurant, even filming there in 2014 when the family stayed in North Sea for their TV series Kourtney and Khloé Take the Hamptons. And the list of famous 75 Main guests is not limited to reality stars.

The hotspot has welcomed everyone from Real Housewives cast members, such as Sonja Morgan and Ramona Singer (among others); to TV icons Sofia Vergara and Susan Lucci; athletes Amar’e Stoudemire, Jason Kidd and Alex Rodriguez; newscasters Barbara Walters and Hoda Kotb; Howard Stern and Beth Ostrosky Stern; rocker Jon Bon Jovi; celebrity chef Bobby Flay; designer Calvin Klein; Oscar winners Jodie Foster, Jamie Foxx and Leonardo DiCaprio; Victoria’s Secret models; politician Nancy Pelosi and many, many others. In 2011, then-Vice President Joe Biden even ate at 75 Main.

All one needs to do is visit Erdem’s @zacherdem Instagram account to see he never misses a chance to grab a photo with his A-list diners, to the delight of his more than 72,000 followers.

KENDALL JENNER AND ZACH ERDEM GET THE PARTY GOING AT 75 MAIN

With all the celebrity and social media buzz, the restaurant owner says he’d been pitched shows many times over the years by TV executives who frequented 75 Main, but all of them wasted his time. Then he met Teresa Sorkin, an author and producer who wanted to host a book signing at the restaurant. Erdem said he’d do it for a price, which she didn’t want to pay, so the matter was dropped.

“Then this lady, for some reason she liked me, and she was like, ‘I want to do a show here,’” Erdem recalls. “OK, this is another one,” I think. I wasn’t even friendly to her,” he recalls, explaining that he immediately eighty-sixed the idea. But Sorkin proved she was serious, and before long they had the ball rolling on what would become Serving the Hamptons. Erdem was impressed by how quickly the producer made things happen, and soon he was a believer — and so was the Discovery network.

“First, the network wanted three episodes, just for the pilot, trying to see how it goes,” he says. “But then when they saw the product, they were like, ‘Wow, this is great, let’s continue and make it four, and then five.’”

Now, with just a month to go before Serving the Hamptons airs on Discovery+, Erdem is readying himself for the worldwide attention it will bring him and the Hamptons, including a great deal of interest from press in his home country of Turkey, among other outlets around the globe. “You have to be really careful now. The whole world is going to see you,” he says, noting that he’s ready.

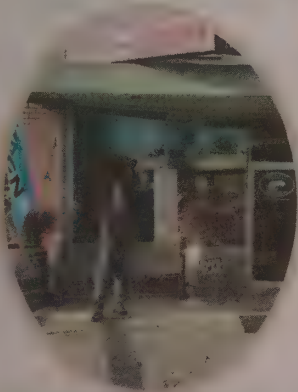

More than that, Erdem is giddy with excitement about how far his life has come. “I am still living in a dream. I don’t know if it’s real. I don’t know. I don’t want to wake up one day back in Turkey, in the mountains with my animals, like wow, this was a long journey, I had a beautiful dream!”

EAST END LIVING

St. Patrick's Day Parades Return to the Hamptons & North Fork

BY DAVID TAYLOR

With St. Patrick's Day being the first holiday practically canceled outright by the March 2020 shutdown, it's incredibly exciting to see that in 2022, every single Hamptons and North Fork parade is back and ready to give East End communities a reason to celebrate. Though St. Paddy's officially falls on Thursday, March 17, parades will take place the weekends before and after, giving Irish East Enders and their green-clad friends plenty of chances to take part in this celebration of heritage and better days ahead.

HAMPTONS

53rd Annual Westhampton Beach St. Patrick's Day Parade

When: Saturday, March 12, noon

Where: Main Street, Westhampton Beach

What: Picking up right where things left off, the would-be 2020 grand marshal, Quogue resident and tricycle-riding leader of the Coneheads Preston Jankowski, will finally lead the parade as grand marshal. The theme of his parade, however, has changed — with the "Love Local" motif traded for the hopeful message: "Back to Our Future!" Call 631-506-1473 or visit whbstpats.com for more info.

How: The fundraiser will be held on Saturday, March 5, 7–11 p.m., at Irish pub The Claddagh (141 Montauk Highway, Westhampton Beach). Entry tickets are $20, and raffle tickets are $5 each.

19th Annual Center Moriches St. Patrick's Day Parade

When: Sunday, March 13, 2 p.m.

Where: Main Street, Center Moriches

What: The Chamber of Commerce of the Moriches welcomes the community to cheer on this year's floats, Irish princess and grand marshal, 90-year-old Kenneth Johnson — a man who devoted 70 of those years to the Center Moriches Fire Department. Call 631-874-0003 or visit moricheschamber.org for more info.

How: A parade dinner will be hosted on Friday, March 11 at 7 p.m. at the Rock Hill Country Club (105 Clancy Road, Manorville), giving the community a chance to meet the 2022 grand marshal. Tickets are $75 and include buffet dinner, open bar, music and entertainment by Irish step dancers.

16th Annual Hampton Bays St. Patrick's Day Parade

When: Saturday, March 19, 11 a.m.

Where: Ponquogue Avenue to Main Street, Hampton Bays

What: The Hampton Bays Hibernians' 2022 parade will finally honor founding member, Quinlan Electric owner and would-be 2020 grand marshal Michael Quinlan with his chance to lead the parade. For more details, call 516-297-2563 or visit the new parade website at hbstpatrikssdayparade.com.

Am O'Gansett St. Patrick's Day Parade

When: Saturday, March 19, noon

Where: Main Street, Amagansett

What: The Amagansett Chamber of Commerce has announced that the shenanigans shall return at the "world's shortest parade." It will be led by grand marshals Katie Baldwin and Amanda Merrow of Amber Waves Farm. Locals who wish to march can email director@amagansettchamber.org. Call 516-456-4016 or visit amagansettchamber.org for additional info.

60th Annual Montauk Friends of Erin St. Patrick's Day Parade

When: Sunday, March 27, noon

Where: Edgemere Road to Main Street, Montauk

What: The Montauk Friends of Erin St. Paddy's Day parade, one of the largest in New York, is back after a successful 2021 parade. The honor of being crowned this year's grand marshal — a tradition that dates back to grand marshal Mike Egan in 1963 — has been given to Marilyn Behan, a Montauk resident for over 50 years, during which she served as a Montauk Village Association member and Montauk Chamber of Commerce executive director. Call 631-668-1578 or visit montaukfriendsoferin.org for more info.

HORSES AT THE WESTHAMPTON BEACH ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARADE

How: The 17th annual Corned Beef & Cabbage Dinner will take place on Saturday, March 5 at Shagwong Tavern (774 Montauk Highway, Montauk). Tickets are $20 at the door, $15 for kids. Then, an exclusive grand marshal luncheon will be held on Friday, March 25 at Gurney's Montauk Resort & Seawater Spa (290 Old Montauk Highway, Montauk). Call 631-235-3991 to inquire about tickets.

NORTH FORK

Cutchogue St. Patrick's Day Parade

When: Saturday, March 12, 2 p.m.

Where: Route 25 (Eugenes Lane to Cases Lane), Cutchogue

What: The North Fork Chamber's parade showcases a strong sense of community with local fire departments, pipe bands, Irish dancers, civic and business organizations and even classic car drivers participating. Would-be 2020 grand marshal, Cutchogue resident David Gamburg, served as superintendent of both the Greenport and Southold school districts and retired at the end of that school year after 34 years in education. While two years delayed, his second shot at grand marshal still serves as a thankful sendoff for the amazing work he's done for North Fork students. For more information, call 516-885-9138 or visit northforkchamber.org.

Jamesport St. Patrick's Day Parade

When: Saturday, March 26, 1 p.m.

Where: Route 25 (Washington Avenue to Manor Lane), Jamesport

What: Like many of the Hamptons parades, the East End Emerald Society's parade will honor the would-be 2020 grand marshal this year. This means it's finally time for Riverhead Town community development administrator Dawn Thomas, Esq. to march as Jamesport's first female grand marshal. Call 516-732-3672 or visit eastendemeraldssociety.org for more info.

Hamptons Soul:

Prayers for Peace in Ukraine

RABBI JOSH FRANKLIN

In early rabbinic literature, the rabbis of old had a debate about the value of the blessing peace provides us. Each rabbi offers his opinion as to why peace is fundamental to our existence and continued survival.

Rabbi Eliezer HaKapar proclaims that so great is peace that it is the seal of all other blessings. His son added that so great is peace, that even when war is completely necessary, peace is preferred. Rabbi Hanania taught that so great is peace, that it outweighs all of the other works of creation.

The onepmanship about the greatness of peace continues ad nauseam long past these few examples. One might wonder why the rabbis were so obsessed with peace. The reason it seems, was that they lived in a time of ongoing war and persecution. They put peace on a pedestal because their lives were too often lacking it.

Our deepest prayers are for the things for which we feel the most desperate. Right now, as Ukraine and her citizens struggle to defend her borders and homes against unprovoked Russian aggression, my prayers are for peace in the region. The onlooking world feels powerless in the face of the Russian attacks on Ukraine and threats on anyone who even talks about interceding. While prayers for peace might seem hollow, they offer us an avenue of hope when despair feels ever pervasive. Prayers for peace bring us together to remind us that our starting point is always love for each other even when hatred fuels conflict. As the Psalmist writes, we should always "seek peace and pursue it" (Psalm 34:15).

Jewish prayer books are filled with prayers for peace. The crowning benediction of our central set of prayers implores: "May the One who makes peace on high, bring peace to us, to Israel and to all the world." Another prayer concludes, "Bless Your people at all times and at every moment with Your peace." One line from the now out-of-print prayerbook Gates of Prayer poetically pleads: "Grant us peace, Your most precious gift, O eternal source of peace, and give us the will to proclaim its message to all the peoples of the earth." While these prayers may speak to the timeless need for peace, I feel compelled to offer a prayer from my heart directed specifically toward Ukraine and her people.

May the God who loves peace, and teaches us to pursue it, instill within us and in all of humanity the inclination to love and be compassionate, to support the vulnerable among us, to uplift the oppressed and the fallen and to restore harmony where it has been shattered.

Shelter those in danger underneath the shade of your warm embrace. Sustain those who flee for their lives with sanctuary and open arms to greet them. Quell the fears of those who tremble with angst and terror. Grant wisdom and good counsel to those who lead us, and bless them with both the courage to stand up to tyranny and brutality and the patient hearts needed to work together toward peace.

When peace comes, may it not just be a lack of war and violence. May it be like the prophetic vision promised by Isaiah: "Let nation not lift up sword against nation; neither should they learn war anymore (Isaiah 2:4)." Show us the paths of peace, O God, so that we can walk humbly together with each other, and with You

FATHER CONSTANTINE LAZARAKIS

Each Sunday, I pray the following words: "For civil authorities and our armed forces, grant them to govern in peace, Lord, so that in their tranquility we, too, may live calm and serene lives, in all piety and virtue." This prayer is a constant reminder of how much we take for granted, and how fragile our lives are. As Russia invades Ukraine, it is important for us to remember the true victims of war. Today, the Wall Street Journal published photos of a mother holding her newborn baby in a maternity hospital doubling as a bomb shelter, and of little children huddled with their families in a local sports center, also converted into a make-shift bomb shelter. Can you imagine having to leave home in fear for your life, waiting for the next shoe to drop in a place like Southampton Youth Services or Southampton Hospital?

While we look on, there is precious little that we can do to help. But we can lift our hearts in prayer, raise our voices for justice and offer our solidarity to the innocents who have been killed, injured, displaced and ravaged by war. Neither the expansion of territory nor the quest for a "unifying" national identity are worth the cost in human lives. While I can't claim to understand the nuance of the history between Russia and Ukraine, it is clear that territorial ambitions have now taken priority over the lives of the people. Whenever that is the case, everyone loses.

As we follow these events, let us never lose sight of the true victims of war, and let us also take heed, that in our civil discourse, both abroad and at home, we always remember our common humanity. And let us pray that God restore sanity to the civil authorities perpetrating violence against the people so that Ukrainians, Russians and all of us may live peacefully.

Kristen Glosserman on Turning a New Leaf

BY JUSTIN MITSELMAKHER

The world is in one big funk. With the onset of the coronavirus pandemic in 2020 and its continuing devastation in 2021, many may not have been as eager to pick up a pen and paper to jot down their resolutions for the new year.

While there's no controlling how 2022 will unfold, Kristen Glosserman — esteemed life coach and East Hampton native — is here to remind us that personal success is possible with hope and drive.

Glosserman unveiled If It's Not Right, Go Left in September: a book saturated with 11 lessons to move the reader's life forward in a positive direction. Glosserman says she views the book as a little pocket of a directory of decisions to help when someone finds themselves in a moment of indecision.

While videos on apps like TikTok constantly reference positive manifestation through crystals and affirmations, Glosserman says her recommended technique to attain your desires comes in three steps: think it, write it, share it.

"Thoughts lead us to our goals," she says. "I'm a huge supporter of journaling. I think journaling really allows you to work out those thoughts, and then sharing it with other people makes it real and starts opening doors."

Reflecting within yourself, breaking unhealthy habits and implementing small changes may not sound appetizing for the many caught up in the daily whirlwind of work, family and living through a pandemic. However, Glosserman says pulling yourself out of a rut starts with a simple question: What do I want? "Allow that to lead you," she advises.

Moving towards success boils down to discipline. Even happiness, Glosserman says, is a series of good decisions.

"I'm not a religious person. I'm a hopeful person," she clarifies. "Hope is what drives me. And it's hard work, because if it was easy, everyone would be successful."

Life coaching is not therapy. Glosserman says the biggest difference between the two is, with her clients, each session is measurable in terms of success. It's a step-by-step process that she envisions as a baseball diamond: mindset, discipline, goal setting and accountability.

"We're running the bases and we're closing that loop," she says. "That process is moving them closer to their goals."

While being a mother to four kids, running a hospitality business with her husband and coaching executives from companies like Ralph Lauren and American Express, times of tragedy and uncertainty brought Glosserman to where she is today.

After losing her younger brother, Michael, when she was 13, "I felt particularly motivated to do something positive with my life and to do something that could really positively impact the lives of others," Glosserman says. "I'm so grateful to my clients because I love my work so much, and I love working with them. It's an honor when someone says, 'Partner with me in my life.'"

Glosserman found life coaching in her late 20s when going through a divorce and reevaluating her future.

KRISTEN GLOSSERMAN

After receiving certifications from the Institute of Life Coach Training, she commenced on the path towards her passion.

While the past few years have been anything but easy, Glosserman shared her secret to staying motivated.

"Celebrate the small wins," she says. "The celebration is when you do what you say you want to do. That's the celebration. Small, achievable goals."

'The Laramie Project' at North Fork Community Theatre Directed by Huck Hirsch

BY ANGELA LAGRECA

In a time when the world is still grappling with unspeakable events and man's inhumanity to man, The Laramie Project — currently running at the North Fork Community Theatre in Mattituck through March 13 — is a chilling and challenging reminder about the depths of hatred and the heights of humanity within ourselves and our communities.

Hailed as a compelling, gripping and intensely powerful piece of documentary theater when it debuted 23 years ago, The Laramie Project is a series of verbatim interviews conducted by Moises Kaufman and the Tectonic Theater Project with a variety of real people in the traumatized town of Laramie, Wyoming in the aftermath of the senseless, brutal death of 21-year-old gay college student Matthew Shepard, who was kidnapped, savagely beaten, tied to a fence and left to die in the plains of Laramie in 1998. Barely breathing, Shepard was found by chance by a kid on a bicycle and after five days in a coma, he died in a Colorado hospital with his family around him.

The intensity, sadness and beauty of the play is not lost on Huck Hirsch, who is directing the production of The Laramie Project at the North Fork Community Theatre and who submitted it to NFCT where it was chosen out of over 50 submissions as one of its four main stage productions.

"As a 66-year-old gay man who very well remembers living through the Matt Shepard (aftermath) — he was George Floyd in 1998," says Hirsch. "The Laramie Project is about loss, it's about community, it's about tragedy, it's about unconscionable things that happened and senseless murders and losing people prematurely ... that resonates for so many people beyond the gay journey forward in this country."

The idea to stage The Laramie Project came out of a series of weekly play readings on Zoom that Hirsch, a Cutchogue resident, had initiated with a group of theater-minded friends when the pandemic first hit and shutdowns put a halt to a local play that Hirsch was involved in.

Hirsch picked the weekly plays and the group read them on Zoom among themselves. Ever creative, he began to choose plays based on themes. And then nine months into the weekly Tuesday play readings on Zoom, the idea of reading The Laramie Project as a great ensemble production hit him. Hirsch needed something to fill the slot on Tuesday, December 1, 2020 and in an eerily divine coincidence, Hirsch realized that December 1 happened to be Matthew Shepard's birthday.

But instead of keeping it to the Zoom actors, Hirsch asked the Tuesday play club members to ask friends to join the Zoom. They added a few props to make it more presentational. And in a forward-thinking moment meant to avoid the end-of-zoom-feeling of disconnection and abruptness, Hirsch built in a talkback time after the Zoom, due to the sensitive nature of the material. Some people stayed.

And that's when he knew he was on to something.

"People were crying, sharing, talking," says Hirsch, adding that the talkback made him realize "just how much more meaningful the play was. ... It just triggers a lot," says Hirsch.

DIRECTOR HUCK HIRSCH

During the run-through, Hirsch says the guy who does the props for the play — "who sat through it five or six times, was balling." Hirsch's reaction? "I was like, 'The well doesn't run dry.' These feelings, these hopes, these dreams for the world we live in are deep."

He seems immeasurably proud and respectful of the commitment and time given by the cast of 15 actors, who play 80-plus characters and volunteer their time for this production.

"It's a beautifully diverse cast of 20-year-old college students to a couple of 67-year-old locals — it's really a range of people, which is also something I love about ensemble theater. ... They are all talented, beautiful, amazing people."

For this production, Hirsch is utilizing the theater's new large screen projection video wall to integrate into the play's 40 scenes the images of Laramie he got when working with a local photographer there. The video wall is a modern touch to what he describes as a theater that is "pretty charming in its oldness."

In terms of bringing quality community theater to the East End, Hirsch, who by day runs a design and construction business on the North Fork with his partner of 23 years, says he is "living my own dream" in terms of personal fulfillment. He says he wants to "empower theater in this community to become a more important thing."

How does Hirsch think the production will be received?

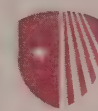

"I expect that we are mostly to be preaching to the choir, which is not a bad thing either because it's just a beautiful piece of theater and it's just a really open wound for many people on many levels ... the wound itself of shame, acceptance and validation," says Hirsch, adding, "The Laramie Project is trying to give a space for healing — and your own grief and your own struggles. ... We all have a voice, we all have a place in our own communities ... it reminds us that we have the power if we choose to use it."

The Laramie Project is running at the North Fork Community Theatre in Mattituck March 4-6 and 11-13 with a talkback after the March 6 performance. Admission is $20. For more information and tickets visit nfct.com or call 631-298-6328.

COPING WITH DEATH

Handling a Death Away From Home & Seeking Closure

SHUTTERSTOCK

Whether you're a snowbird going to a warmer climate to escape winter weather or you're traveling on a business trip, it's wise to prepare for the unexpected. People fall victim to new or existing medical conditions, hate crimes, terrorist attacks and military invasions.

Death is always an overwhelming event, especially so when it occurs away from home. That's why it's wise to carry a wallet-sized card listing the names of your next-of-kin, the telephone number of your funeral director and stating whether any funeral pre-arrangements have been made. Most travelers wouldn't dream of leaving home on an extended trip without carrying along copies of prescriptions, yet how many think to include personal information that would facilitate their final arrangements if the unthinkable happens?

Robert Ruggiero, a licensed New York City funeral director, offers these suggestions to help cope with death away from home.

Don't leave the body. The most frequent response by family members experiencing a death away from home is to hurry home to begin funeral arrangements. However, most deaths that occur while traveling are sudden and require an investigation by the local medical examiner's office and police department. The family member traveling with the person who remains available to the authorities at the place of death will expedite the return process.

If a person has died and family is not with the deceased, survivors should not fly out to the place of death. With today's technology, there's a good possibility that if identification is required, survivors can save time by staying home and requesting another means to accomplish the necessary procedures.

Appoint your hometown funeral director as the "point person." Allow him or her to select the means of returning your loved one home. Your family funeral director is familiar with the necessary procedures to ease the process for you.

If the death occurs overseas, the U.S. State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs in Washington, D.C. or the local embassy can provide emergency assistance for Americans traveling overseas who encounter a tragedy of this nature. For more information visit the Bureau of Consular Affairs website travel.state.gov/content/passports/en/abroad/events-and-records/death.html or call 202-647-5225.

Any expense will ultimately be the responsibility of the bereaved family but because of the State Department's intervention, there may be no immediate upfront expense in most cases. For further advice, you might want to call your local funeral director before leaving home.

IS CLOSURE EVER POSSIBLE?

What of those on the other side of tragedy, waiting for a loved one's return from work or a trip abroad? How can they begin to process what's happened and move forward with their lives?

We hear people talking about "closure" as if there is a door that can be shut after experiencing a tragedy in our lives, losing a loved one or being witness to a horrific event.

Friends might ask, "Haven't you reached closure yet?" But grief cannot be forced or pushed or closed off from our minds. There is no magic formula for working through grief.

The fact of the matter is that grief must be expressed and dealt with. We all experience and react to loss in different ways depending on the relationship of the deceased to us, our past experiences with loss, and sometimes even our health and emotional state.

Grieving for a lost loved one can take years, sometimes a lifetime. According to Curtis Rostad, a certified funeral service practitioner who has been a licensed funeral director since 1973, there is no such thing as closure. He maintains that those who refuse to begin the journey through grief simply delay their own recovery.

Rostad goes on to explain why he thinks the concept of closure is mentioned so often in today's culture. "It should come as little surprise that a generation of people brought up with minute rice, instant coffee and microwave ovens would search for quick relief from something we call grief," he says. "We hear it from those who go to the scene of a disaster where their family member has died. We hear it from those who witness the execution of the person convicted of killing their loved one. We hear it expressed by those who have someone missing in war."

In Rostad's long experience in helping families deal with grief, he has found that seeking closure only produces feelings of frustration that join the emotions of sorrow. There is no closure, but there is a point where people have a great deal of acceptance, even peace of mind, and are able to move on to a different frame of mind. It's a frame of mind that leaves them supported by the memories, but empowered to continue with their lives knowing they did all they could do with respect to the person they lost.

Why would anyone seek closure? Why would anyone want to close the door on thoughts about a departed loved one?

Grief will soften in the years after a loss, but the door to memories should always be open.

OBITUARY

Environmental Defense Fund Co-founder and Hamptons Native Art Cooley Dies

BY TIMOTHY BOLGER

Art Cooley, a Hamptons native who a half century ago co-founded the Environmental Defense Fund (EDF) — among the most influential nonprofits of its kind in the world — has died. He was 87.

A former Bellport High School biology teacher, Cooley joined forces with a group of other environmentalists to sue states nationwide, winning court orders that blocked the use of the toxic pesticide DDT in the 1960s.

"We knew DDT was damaging the eggshells of birds, preventing chicks and eaglets from hatching," Cooley recalled in a blog posted to the website of the EDF, which was formed "with the express purpose of going after DDT," he told the voiceofsandiego.org. "We took Suffolk County to court and won an injunction against the use of DDT. After that victory, we pursued the case state by state until we ultimately won a nationwide ban in 1972."

Born Arthur P. Cooley on June 2, 1934 in Southampton, his father was former Quogue Mayor Harvey Cooley and his mother Helen (Collier) Cooley was a homemaker. Cooley grew up in Quogue before getting his masters degree in biology from Cornell University. He later married Nancy Nienstadt, moved to Patchogue, and joined the faculty at the school in Brookhaven, where he inspired countless students' curiosity about the natural world. He died of natural causes January 30 at his home in Colorado, where he moved with his second wife Beverly Grant.

"He opened our young eyes to ocean life, bird migrations (and) more," tweeted one of his former students, Elizabeth Shreeve, a children's book author who writes nature-themed books.

EDF grew from a small grassroots operation to have an endowment of more than $221 million as of 2020, with more than 2.5 million members and over 1,000 staffers around the world. Cooley served in various capacities over the years, including as its chairman, until recently.

He is survived by his son Jonathan and two grandchildren.

HOME IMPROVEMENT

Dan's Papers Home & Garden Show Coming to Southampton

If you're thinking about making any home improvements over the next year, one of the best ways to get ideas and find the ideal vendors is at the Dan's Papers Home & Garden Show, which will be held April 23 and 24 at Stony Brook University at Southampton.

Attending the Dan's Papers Home & Garden Show, hosted by the only news and lifestyle weekly publication covering the entire East End, will give you an opportunity to shop around and get to meet the people behind the companies that specialize in servicing homeowners in the Hamptons and on the North Fork.

This event combines everything home and garden related and the opportunity to meet important business owners who are on-site to showcase their services and unique product offerings. Think of everything your home needs such as companies to make homes that are luxurious, durable, attractive, cost-effective, energy efficient and technologically advanced.

From custom homes, to remodeling to land development, the Dan's Papers Home & Garden Show brings together all sectors of the home improvement industry under one roof. It provides a wealth of networking opportunities, information and contacts for home related goods and services in the Hamptons.

Attendees will find innovative products, decoration and remodeling ideas; home improvement specialists; gardening products; experts from windows to flooring to cabinets and landscaping; buying, renting, financing and much more. The exhibition area has space for over 100 vendors.

The Dan's Papers Home & Garden Show is scheduled for 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

Saturday, April 23 and Sunday, April 24. It will be held at the Stony Brook University Southampton campus, 70 Tuckahoe Road, Southampton.

To pre-register to attend or to become a sponsor, visit DansHomeShow.com. For info on exhibiting or speaking at the event, email Ali Jabbour at AJabbour@SchnepsMedia.com.

HIGH PROFILE

Rob Schmitt: A Newsman to Keep an Eye On

BY TODD SHAPIRO

Rob Schmitt is among the fastest-growing names in cable news. Hosting a primetime program that bears his name, Schmitt has reached millions across the nation and continues to do so in a no-nonsense style with common sense perspective.

Appearing on the fastest-growing news network in the country, Newsmax, Schmitt has had a long and accomplished career in broadcast journalism. Hailing from the heartland — Carmel, Indiana, to be precise — Schmitt brings a unique foundation and news judgment to his program, which is in line with the Newsmax slogan: Real News for Real People.

"I was born and raised in the Midwest and I think that a vast majority of the people that are watched on the news just do not relate to the average American anymore," says Schmitt. "Many of the major networks were raised outside of a major city and consider where I am from to be nothing more than a flyover state."

"I am the son of an immigrant from Iran and was raised in Central Indiana, which gives me a very interesting vantage point," says Schmitt. "And the area I grew up in was filled with good natured, good hearted, conservative people. I think that understanding people like us is imperative to what we do in news, because many others who are in journalism live in Washington, D.C., or New York bubbles, and are disconnected with the reality of how most of America lives."

Although now based in Newsmax's New York headquarters, Schmitt has reported on news in various parts of the country. He anchored shows for various local affiliates in major media markets, including with ABC Miami, WNBC-4 New York and CBS Los Angeles before his tenure in national news began.

In 2016, Schmitt was named the co-host of FOX News Channel's morning show, Fox & Friends first. Spending four years at the post, Schmitt joined Newsmax just before the 2020 presidential election, which then launched Rob Schmitt Tonight.

"I came to Newsmax when we were a very small media company, but as we covered the 2020 election, our presence grew rapidly," he says. "We have quickly turned into a network with larger audiences than Bloomberg, CNBC and a number of other household networks."

In some ways, Schmitt is making news by reporting on the news that matters most to Americans across the country. It was during Rob Schmitt Tonight that reports emerged of Russian President Vladimir Putin's declaration of war and launch of a military offensive against Ukraine. While the world watched, it was Schmitt who relayed the breaking news, of interest to American national security, to the country.

Schmitt was responsible for delivering factual reporting on this issue of importance to an anxious America — a situation that still develops to this moment.

"The situation in Ukraine was one that was very complicated to report on, especially as someone who had visited there in the past," he says. "Ukraine was a real place, with good people, who don't deserve to be in this situation. I tried to relay this reality in reporting on it that evening."

"The United States has become so comfortable that we get angry about things that offend us, or that does not matter — while just a flight away, there is a grandmother learning how to use a firearm to protect herself from a military trying to take over her country," he says.

Outside of live reporting on Ukraine, Schmitt has interviewed many high-profile individuals, and most notably, former President Donald J. Trump.

"Interviewing President Trump is a big interview in many ways — when he walks into a room, everything stops," he says. "I have met plenty of celebrities, but none of them have the presence of Donald Trump, he's a larger-than-life person who has had a huge presence in this country and media for over the last 30 years.

"President Trump is one of the misunderstood people in the world, and I have never met anyone else like him," he continues. "He has always been warm, gracious and personable to me and is an all-around interesting guy. He's got more street smarts than anyone I have met in Washington, and while this does not mean that he is always right, when everyone is guessing, I see why people trust his guess more often than not."

Schmitt now considers himself a New Yorker. Spending most of his time in Manhattan, he also owns a home on the East End in the quaint hamlet of Wainscott.

"I bought a house there in 2020 that needed a lot of work, so I have spent a lot of time there working on it," he says. "More recently, even during the winter months, I spend mostly every weekend on the East End. In the summer months, I love being by the pool, or playing tennis — really, I enjoy the escape from the city."

He frequents many East End hot spots, like Gurney's, East Hampton Grill, American Hotel in Sag Harbor and Murf's.

"People in the Hamptons, unlike elsewhere in the country, do not shy away from talking about politics and I have found that it is much less of a liberal bastion than you would expect," he says. "Even the city dwellers, I find that, politically speaking, they are moving back to the center — aligning more with Kennedy than de Blasio or Biden. I enjoy that the people on the East End come from all across the political aisle and they embrace their politics and speak their mind."

Rob Schmitt Tonight and Newsmax can be found on all major cable systems. Newsmax is carried on DirecTV, Dish, At&T, Tubo and locally on Long Island's Optimum 102 and FiOs 615. More info can be found on newsmaxtv.com/findnewsmaxtv.
